

Glenn Research Center

Smoldering Combustion in Microgravity

Shown here are the polyurethane foam samples flown on USML-1 (STS-50) with their accompanying temperature readouts and control box. The goal of the microgravity combustion experiment was to begin to quantify gravitational effects on the smoldering process and smolder-to-flame transitions of combustible materials.